PRESS RELEASE

December 3, 2016

Dear Sir/ Madam,

The 5th National Convention on Millets was held on November 29-30, 2016 at Nehru Memorial Museum and Library (NMML) at Teen Murthi Bhavan, New Delhi. The event was organised by Deccan Development Society (DDS) an organization working with almost 5000 very small women farmers belonging to dalit communities in Medak district of Telangana, in collaboration with Millet Network of India (MINI) an alliance of more than 145 groups of farmers, scientists, media people from across 13 states of India, NMML and FIAN India.

The two day National Convention also becomes an occasion for the launch of the National Network of Millet Sisters with about 5000 women farmers membership. The convention mainly focused on the promises made in the National Food security Act that promises the supply of 7kgs of millets along with wheat and rice to all the PDS card holders. While this is a laudable step by the government of India the responsibility of implementation of this clause is the complete responsibility of state governments, thereby lies the crux of the current problem even after 3 years of the National Food Security Act. Except for Karnataka no other state government has implemented this provision.

Therefore the Convention met the Union Minister for Food and Civil Supplies, Govt of India Shri Ram Vilas Paswan and urged him to take a serious view of this lapse.

The event was marked by the presence of Chief Guests Ms Maneka Gandhi, Union Minister for Women and Child Development and Smt Prathyusha Rajeshwari, Member of the Parliament for Khandamal constituency, Shri Shakti Sinha Director, Nehru Memorial Museum & Library, Mr Biraj Patnaik, Principal Adviser for Supreme Court Commissioners on Right to Food, Dr Vilas Tanopi, Director, Indian Institute of Millet Research, Dr T N Prakash, Chairman, Agriculture Price Commission for Karnataka. The event received participation from more than 100 millet farmers from different states of the country, civil society organisations, academicians, nutritionists and media experts.

The two day Convention was divided into a number of listening sessions to discuss the role of States, Science and Media for promoting Millets' cultivation and consumption in which we heard concerns of the millet farmers from Andhra Pradesh, Gujarat, Himachal Pradesh, Uttarakhand, Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh, Nagaland, Odisha, Telangana and Tamil Nadu who vividly described the millet situation in their states and they made the Delhi Declaration on Millets (please find the Declaration & some photos attached herewith).

with warm regards,

Delhi Declaration on MILLETS

5th NATIONAL CONVENTION ON MILLETS
Enhancement of millet area to realize a nutritionally secure India

Having met at the Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, New Delhi on November 29th and 30th we the millet farmers, women and men, civil society groups, scientists, policy makers, activists, environmentalists and others have come to the following conclusions which we are presenting as the Declaration from 5th National Convention on Millets.

We divided the two days into a number of Listening Sessions to discuss the role of States, Science and Media for promoting Millets' cultivation and consumption in which we heard concerns of the people from Andhra Pradesh, Gujarat, Himachal Pradesh, Uttarakhand, Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh, Nagaland, Odisha, Telangana and Tamil Nadu who vividly described the millet situation in their states and they made the following declaration.

- Even after three years of the National Food Security Act was made, no state except for Karnataka has implemented the act. While states such as Andhra Pradesh are attempting to introduce millets in food programs in some districts, most of the states remain completely disinterested in even talking about the issues of malnutrition among the poor. MINI strongly feels that the spirit of the Act is still not being realized because of the failure of Food Corporation of India and State government to procure and supply millets in PDS.
- In the context, a representation from Millet Sisters National Network with about 5000 women millet farmers from nine states met the Union Minister for Food and Civil Supplies, Shri Ram Vilas Paswan and urged him to take a serious view of this lapse. A memorandum along with more than two lakh signatures and over 10000 post cards from across the country endorsing the following demands were submitted to him.
- The Convention reiterates the demand made in previous conventions to provide income support to millet farmers for their contribution to climate change, water conservation and nutrition bonus.

- Millets are important today not just for nutrition, but because it also represents the value of diversity that is central to our civilisational ethos. Hence we have to go back and reclaim our local food systems within the framework of food sovereignty and agroecological systems.
- Seed banking efforts being undertaken in various parts of the country should be documented and replicated.
- In the context of global trade and especially the negotiations at the WTO there is a danger of loss of control over intellectual property of millets. These crops are likely to be targeted as they are seen as super foods, and we need to be prepared for the fight. We urge the government to pursue vigorously a permanent solution on the public stock holding issue to safeguard the interest of small and marginal farmers in the country.
- The convention strongly urged the Minister for Women and Child Development, Govt of India, Smt. Maneka Gandhi, who was present at the Convention to abandon the centralized procurement of packaged foods for the supplementary nutrition programme of the ICDS. Instead the take home ration for children under the age of 3 as well as the hot cooked meal for the age groups of 3-6 years as well as all pregnant and nursing mothers a adolescent girls should comprise largely of millets and millet based products which are produced by local women Self Help Groups and farmer producers organisation.
- Millets came as silver lining at the time of distress during the phase of climate change, monocropping and with problems for soils and farmer suicides. Hence, we also suggest that it is important to reduce the cost of production and to ease the harvesting process of millets. And for this both civil supplies and agriculture departments can work hand in hand to frame policies that will help small farmers to cultivate millets in dry land regions which will eventually enhance the millet area.
- The convention has heard a large number of farmers' experiences from across the country that celebrate millet based ecological agriculture. These experiences could be woven into a policy matrix and ensure that India is food, farming and climate secure and we urge science and research community to recognize millet farmers' knowledge as science.
